

DO NOT limit local programming access via satellite radio! This nonsense has already been applied to satellite television, and is absurd. I should be able to pay to listen to any regional information available, not just what my local broadcasters offer. If the local broadcasters lose market share, they should take a look at what they offer in their programming--perhaps they don't address their market, or there isn't a large market in the area for what can be provided via satellite.

In any case, the FCC needs to represent the needs and wants of the public, not just the special interests of the broadcasters.

Thank you.
